

The 2017 Sociological Review Monograph

Title: Reconfiguring the Anthropology of Britain: Ethnographic, Theoretical and Interdisciplinary Perspectives

Editors:

Dr Cathrine Degnen (School of Geography, Politics & Sociology, Newcastle University)

Dr Katharine Tyler (Department of Sociology, Philosophy & Anthropology, University of Exeter)

Table of Contents:

Introduction: 'Bringing Britain into being: sociology, anthropology and British lives' Cathrine Degnen and Katharine Tyler

Preface: 'Studying Britain: a British sociologist's view'
Steph Lawler

Preface: 'Barefoot in Britain – yet again: on multiple identities, intersection(ality) and marginality'
Pnina Werbner

Chapter 1: 'Amongst the disciplines: anthropology, sociology, intersection, and intersectionality'
Cathrine Degnen and Katharine Tyler

Chapter 2: 'Relocating the British subject: ethnographic encounters with identity politics and nationalism during the 2014 Scottish independence referendum' Alexander Smith

Chapter 3: "'We don't want to be sent back and forth all the time": Migration studies and an anthropology of Britain beyond the British Isles'
Laura Jeffery

Chapter 4: 'Social class and the cultural turn: anthropology, sociology and the post-industrial politics of 21st century Britain'
Gillian Evans

Chapter 5: 'Zombie democracy: apathy, personhood and the anthropology of actually existing politics'
Insa Koch

Chapter 6: "'You don't own money, you're just the one who's holding it": borrowing, lending and the fair person in North Manchester'
Katherine Smith

Chapter 7: ' "Doing your best" in a London secondary school: valuing, caring and thinking through neoliberalism'
Sarah Winkler-Reid

Chapter 8: 'Anthropocene East Anglia'
Richard Irvine

Chapter 9: 'Loudly sing cuckoo: more-than-human seasonalities in Britain'
Andrew Whitehouse

Commentary: 'Actually existing classes'
Jeanette Edwards

Commentary: 'Africa's Britain, disciplined'
Ann H. Kelly

Epilogue: "'Anthropology", "Sociology", "British", "Porter": the limits of labels and cultural categories'
Nigel Rapport